Oral and maxillofacial surgery is an integral branch of dentistry that deals with diagnosis and treatment, both medical and surgical management of disease, injury, developmental defect and pathology of the hard and soft tissues in the oral and maxillofacial region. Your foundational ideas of the above mentioned notions will be covered throughout the session.

In addition, basic medical practice involving dentistry and use of mill to restore dentulous surgery primarily involving surgical removal of impacted teeth, cysts and fundamentals of implantology are also introduced to the students. Specific consideration will be given to the use of custom computer designed patient specific implants (PSI) in reconstructive surgery. Every dental student should be able to execute a good oral surgical practice with grace, skill and capability after completing the workshop.
